Ciara Love

Vice President of Emerging Leaders

Ciara Love is Vice President of Emerging Leaders for AFCEA Pacific Northwest. She likes getting the right people in the room and asking the question everyone's been thinking about. She brings that energy to events that connect early-career professionals with people across the military, government, and industry.

Ciara began her Air Force career in precision calibration on active duty, then moved into cyber defense and battle management in the Washington Air National Guard. Today, she helps evaluate new defense systems and turns operator feedback into findings engineers and program teams can act on. Through AFCEA, she wants more people early in their careers to walk into a room full of experts, ask a hard question, and know their perspective belongs there.
